

Thursday, February 11th, 2010

Folk culture seminar to start tomorrow

Jain University faculty of arts, humanities and social sciences is conducting a two-day national conference on folk culture in literature in various languages. The aim of this conference is to explore the various forms in which folk literature exists, understand the reasons due to which folk literature has stood the test of time and what are the lessons that modern, contemporary literature could learn from this sustainability. The conference will be held on February 12 and 13 at School of Graduate Studies, Jain University.