

Course Work commences for the August 2015 Batch of Ph.D. and M.Phil. Students

The Course Work classes for the August 2015 batch of Ph.D. and M.Phil. students registered in Jain University commenced on the 27 of August 2015. At an Inaugural program, Dr. Chenraj Roychand, President, Jain University delivered the inaugural lecture and Dr N Sundararajan, Vice Chancellor, Jain University presided over the function.

Through a rigorous process of selection a selected group of researchers formally joined the Ph.D. and M.Phil. Programs of Jain University in August 2015. The selected students were spread across six domains: Science, Languages, Social Sciences, Management, Commerce and Engineering and Technology.

The program began with a melodious invocation rendered by the newly admitted research students in the Department of Music. Dr. Sandeep Shastri, Pro Vice Chancellor, Jain University, then welcomed the newly joined researchers and outlined the details of the Course work. He highlighted the fact that the University Research program placed a premium on quality and innovation.

Dr. Chenraj Roychand, President, Jain University, in his inaugural lecture welcomed all the researchers and encouraged them to develop the passion for research and not merely pursue the same to acquire a degree. He focused on the need to ensure that the research work undertaken at Jain University is of social relevance and contributes to further expanding the existing body of knowledge. He drew attention to the fact that the proper management of time was the key to success. He stressed on the need to prioritize ones activities and accord the necessary importance to one's research work. He wished every researcher a successful and fulfilling 'voyage of intellectual discovery'.

Presiding over the function, Dr N Sundararajan, Vice Chancellor, Jain University, welcomed all the researchers who had joined the Doctoral and M.Phil. Program. He underscored the importance of commitment, thirst for learning and an ever inquisitive mind. Citing a range of examples, he drew attention to the fact that success in the 'world' of research was a by-product of passion, patience and persistence. He hoped that every researcher would gain from the structured and focused course work schedule that had been meticulously planned by the University.

Dr Mythili P Rao, the Dean of Languages and Coordinator of the Ph.D. and M.Phil. Programs, concluded the program by thanking all the Principal Officers of the University for having graced the occasion. She also acknowledged the presence of the Research Guides and the students and hoped that the inaugural lecture had set the tone and pace for the rigorous of the Course work that would follow.

Jain University wishes its newest batch of Researchers the very best in their academic journey and research endeavors.
