

Going green for a better tomorrow

Coir, glass, plastic bottles, jute wires, mechanical screws, one cannot quite fathom furniture being made out materials of such random nature. That is exactly what the students of the Department of Interior Design, Jain University, did to spread awareness among the youth to go green. They organised a “Go Green Day” on 13 July 2015.

The students conducted an exhibition where they displayed products created out of sustainable materials. Recycling and reuse of materials play a big role in maintaining the ecosystem as it is. The students embraced this concept and created numerous articles ranging from lampshades made out of reusable paper to children’s table and chair made of recycled wood. Apart from this, the students also emphasised on the need to conserve energy and plant more trees by displaying posters and banners on the merits of going green. Well-known Kannada television artists Ms. Brinda and Ms. Geetha inaugurated the event and released the annual magazine “Zakti” compiled by the students.

The programme stressed on the need to go green on an everyday basis. Events like these should act as reminders to conserve nature. Only then can we sustain the ecosystem and secure it for generations to come.
